Dear Mr. Ritch,

Re: ICT Decision 2010-4 - Decision on Deep Packet Inspection and Similar Technologies in the Cayman Islands

Thank you for your letter of 28 April 2010 regarding ICT Decision 2010-4.

Your letter expresses LIME's disappointment with some of the language employed by the Authority in ICT Decision 2010-4, in particular the statement at paragraph 55 that "[i]n light of the above, the Authority hereby notifies Digicel and WestTel that their current uses of DPI, and LIME's proposed uses of DPI, are in breach of clause 12 of their respective ICT licences." According to LIME, this statement could be interpreted as an indication that LIME is in breach of its licence, despite the fact that it has not implemented DPI on its network.

The Authority considers that ICT Decision 2010-4, when read in its entirety, does not support this interpretation. Nevertheless, the Authority agrees that LIME did not breach clause 12 of its ICT licences by simply proposing to implement DPI on its network. In the interest of clarity, the Authority confirms that the intent of ICT Decision 2010-4 is to convey that LIME would, prima facie, be in breach of clause 12 of its licence if and when it were to implement DPI in the manner described in its submissions in the DPI proceeding.

Yours sincerely,

David Arehbold
